

Sara Santos
Comm108
9/13/23

	Opportunities in America.
Where are you from?	Ghana
What did you have to do to fit in?	"I started to do sports, listening to their different genres of music for example, Rap or freestyling."
What language do you speak?	"I speak english and ewe"
Once you arrived did that perception change?	"Yes, It did, because I saw parents actually caring for their kids and giving them quality time, and that kind of impacted me"
What values do you have that you would never give up even if you're in America?	"Spending time with family and always respecting the country that I came from"

Interview Brief

During this interview I felt as if I was really connecting and relating with this person. I got to learn about his life and about his past and how his life used to be back in his country. It's actually funny how I've known this person but I never really asked about his past or about his country Ghana. I started to realize that we had more things in common than what I thought and started to discover more interesting experiences of him.

This experience affected my perception of immigrants because it made me realize how everyone can still miss their country, family, friends and even if they're far in a different country you can still feel that same connection. Also made me realize how they still hold onto their culture and beliefs, because a lot of people once they come to this country are most likely to forget about their roots.

I personally liked interviewing this person because I didn't know that you could learn something new about someone if you sit and start asking them questions about their life. I first thought that it could be boring interviewing someone but it was actually a good time and opportunity to know more about them.